

POLICE GET NEW CLEW IN THE LICHTENSTEIN MURDER

Dr. W. J. Marvel, 4328 Union av., told a story today that the police believe gives them a definite clew in the Louis Lichtenstein murder.

Dr. Marvel said he was called last night to treat bullet wounds in the left side of the neck and right breast of a man at 4362 Emerald av., who gave his name as Thos. Inns.

The man told Dr. Marvel that he had been shot by a robber in a hold-up last night, so the doctor thought it all right and treated him.

Detectives rushed out to 4362 Emerald av., but the wounded man had gone.

A. F. Chase, 46, 7214 S. Green, was arrested today by the Stock Yards police. Chase, say the police, was a croup of Inns', but he denied knowing anything about the murder. He said he had not seen Inns since 9 o'clock last night.

Wm. Caladanellio, 821 Latrobe av., who died at the West Side hospital today before police had a chance to question him, was not concerned in last night's murder, it was established later today. Caladanellio was wounded at Congress and Aberdeen sts. two weeks ago.

The police had three knotty murders on their hands for solution today. Practically every detective in the city had instructions to follow up clues on the three crimes.

The most startling of the three occurred last night in the exclusive district at 55th and Prairie av. Louis Lichtenstein, advertising man for the Evening Post, was shot and killed by three armed bandits, who held him up as he stepped out of his auto in a garage, two doors from his house at 5418 Prairie av.

In the machine was Emil Noel, his brother-in-law, and with him in a bag were jewels worth $25,000. These were the quest of the robbers.

They stuck up Lichtenstein, but he resisted and jumped at them. Three bullets killed him instantly. Noel also fell back into the car as a bullet grazed his skull.

One of the robbers started beating him with a revolver, but Noel reached for his gun and shot his assailant in the neck. Then the bandits fled without the jewels.

The first clue of the police came when Noel identified a picture of George Irwin, "brains" of the blackmail gang recently exposed by the government. He is being sought together with other members of the "syndicate."

Charlie Matthews, 21, 2011 Howe st., was killed in a saloon fight. James McMahon, 725 Monroe st., Evanston, was taken into custody late last night. He admitted mixing in the battle.

A barber shop crap game is blamed for the murder of Arthur Leeb, 1303 S. Crawford av., salesman, shot at 508 W. Chicago av. The police are on the trail of an unidentified Italian.

PARK BOND ISSUE ON ROCKS

The $2,450,000 proposed bond issue for parks and bathing beaches is on the rocks.

Mayor Thompson says the special parks committee of the council cannot control expenditures and therefore cannot be given the cash if the issue were voted through at election.

Members of the finance committee say Thompson is holding out because he wants to boss the special parks committee.

They are trying to arbitrate today.
